OPTION A.

MY ATTORNEY OR I WILL PURSUE THIRD PARTY ACTION

I wish to seek recovery from the third party myself. I understand that if any recovery is made I must repay the Department of Labor & Industries for my industrial insurance benefits. I also understand that I must notify the department if and when I file a lawsuit. Finally, I authorize the department to communicate with my attorney.

OPTION B.

I ASSIGN THE ACTION TO THE DEPARTMENT

I wish to assign any cause of action that I may have against a third party to the Department of Labor and Industries. I do not intend to pursue a third party action on my own and no recovery has yet been made. I authorize the release of information from my claim file so that a third party action may be pursued. I understand that this assignment does not pertain to loss of consortium (love, affection and companionship) claims of spouses, children or beneficiaries.

F249-008-000 third party action 9-00

You ordinarily cannot sue your employer or co-workers for damages caused by a workplace injury or occupational disease. However, if your workplace injury or occupational disease was caused by a defective product, a defective machine or someone who is not a co-worker, the law requires that they be asked to pay for your medical treatment and other claim expenses. This is done through a formal legal process called a "Third Party Action."

If you believe your workplace injury or occupational disease was caused by someone else, you have a decision to make. You either may pursue a third-party action yourself, or you may ask the Department of Labor and Industries to consider pursuing it.

Please take a moment to review this pamphlet before making your choice. Then complete the Third Party Election form attached to this pamphlet, fold and mail.

If you have questions, write us at the address shown below or call (360) 902-5100.

F249-008-000 [9/00]

Why was I sent this form?

Because your injury or illness may have been caused by a third party.

What is a third party?

Someone other than your employer or a co-worker who may have caused your injury or illness.

Examples include:

- The driver of the car that hit you.
- The manufacturer of a defective product that injured you.
- A property owner who failed to properly maintain the premises.
- A fall that was someone else's fault.
- The owner of an animal that bit you.

What is a third-party action?

A legal action against the liable party.

Do I have to pursue a third-party action?

No. However, the law does require you to make a choice. You must either pursue the action yourself, with or without an attorney (Option A), or assign the action to the Department of Labor and Industries. (Option B).

What if I do nothing?

You are required to complete this form. Failure to complete this form and return it to the department within the required time may result in assignment of third-party action to the department. Any further action is at the discretion of the department.

What are my responsibilities if I decide to pursue the action myself (Option A)?

First, you must notify the department of your election to pursue the action. The law also requires that you or your attorney notify the department when a lawsuit is filed and keep the department informed of the progress of the action. In fact, if the action is not diligently pursued, the department can petition the court to have it assigned to the department.

In addition, the law requires that you or your attorney obtain department approval of a settlement under certain circumstances. If a settlement is insufficient to cover the cost to reimburse the department of your industrial insurance claim, the department can deny approval or can declare void any settlement to which you have agreed.

Finally, the law requires that you or your attorney advise the department of the amount that has been recovered and the attorney fees and costs associated with the recovery and repay the department for your industrial insurance benefits.

What are my responsibilities if I decide to assign the action to the department (Option B)?

The department will decide whether to pursue the action. Your help may be necessary in making this decision. In addition, if an action is filed, your deposition testimony or in-court testimony may be required. This, of course, is true whether you assign the action to the department or pursue it yourself.

If I assign the action to the department (Option B), what will the department do?

When you assign the action to the department, you are freed from personal responsibility to pay the legal costs involved in such actions. However, you also give up your right to control the action. The department will decide whether to pursue the action.

If the department pursues the action, it will attempt to recover the full amount of damages available under the law. If a recovery is made, the department will distribute the recovery in compliance with the statute and issue an order and notice confirming the distribution.

How does the third-party action affect my industrial insurance claim?

You are entitled to workers' compensation benefits regardless of fault. However, your industrial insurance benefits must be repaid from any third-party recovery. Workers' compensation benefits may stop once you've recovered from the third party depending upon the amount recovered.

How does the third-party action benefit me?

You will receive a portion of any recovery made. The law specifies how a recovery is to be apportioned among you, your attorney (if any) or the department's attorney (if any), and the department on behalf of the industrial insurance funds.

What do I do now?

After reviewing this material, please make your decision, sign the form, and mail it to the department.

PLEASE NOTE: The department believes that all the information in this pamphlet is correct. However, this pamphlet is intended only as a general guide. It is not intended to address specific cases or every possible situation. Moreover, the law regarding third-party recoveries can change and can be complex. This pamphlet is not intended to be an interpretation of the law. You are free to consult with an attorney or call the department for more information.
